

WHAT IS A WATER TRAIL?

A water trail is a recreational boating route along a waterway with strategically located access points similar to a hiking trail or bikeway.

The main difference between a land based trail and a water trail is that the trail already exists on a water trail, but access points are needed.

Unlike a land based trail that usually has one point that visitors enter and leave from, a water trail typically has two or more entry and exit points due to the flow of the water.
