LOCAL ACTION, GLOBAL IMPACT:

Documenting the Difference Makers

OCTOBER 10

Our natural world is changing at an increasingly rapid rate with major implications on the very resources we and other creatures rely on for survival.

But what is to be done? Are these problems too big for an individual to make a difference?

Join us as we explore two short documentary films that prove otherwise and showcase in local and global environmental issues. Following the screenings, a panel discussion with the filmmakers and local experts will explore the small and big ways that individual citizens and groups can contribute to positive change in their own communities.
