Towpath Trail Connecting Farnsworth, Bend View and Providence Metroparks

Providence Dam: A roller dam across the Maumee River is a scenic spot to fish or just relax. The dam was built to divert water into the canal.

The Islands: Three islands in the Maumee River – Indian, Butler and Missionary – can be seen from Farnsworth. They are owned by the Ohio Division of Wildlife.

The "Volunteer" Canal Boat: The 60-passenger "Volunteer" operates on a restored section of the Miami & Erie Canal. The boat, which is towed by mules, is a replica of the vessels that carried people and supplies on the canal system.

Camp at Farnsworth: Group and individual tent sites are available for a riverside camping experience.

Boat & Fishing: The Boat Launch Area at Farnsworth has a seasonal kayak concession, a ramp for small boats and floating fishing platforms.

Bend View Shelter: Bend View is a scenic vantage point to enjoy a dramatic 90-degree bend in the Maumee. A WPA shelter there is available for rent.

Bend View Metropark

The Towpath Trail, where mules once towed flat bottom boats on the Miami & Erie Canal, connects three Metroparks along the scenic Maumee River. Farnsworth overlooks three islands in the river. Bend View's name describes its greatest attribute – the view of a 90-degree bend in the river. At Providence, the history of the canal comes alive at The Canal Experience.
